

SHIPS PENNANT NUMBERS

The Royal Navy Pennant Numbering System

Pennant, or Pendant, numbers were introduced to help to abbreviate signalling and to help make signals more secure, they also served to clear up confusion between ships with similar names and as an aid in identifying ships visually, particularly where ships of the same classification were grouped in a Squadron.

During the war, many ships were transferred between Commonwealth and Allied Navies. Where this did occur, the ship usually kept the same Pennant Number (even though the ships name may well have changed). If a ship was sunk in action, it was usual for the Pennant Number of that ship to be allocated to the next ship to be launched. Renaming of ships was also regularly carried out. During and after the war, some ships had received up to three or four changes of Flag Superior, with many destroyers changing from F to G in 1940, then to L, and later to R. I and D were changed around so that D became I and vice-versa; and finally to D after the war.

Until the Second World War, it was usual for submarines to have only a Pennant Number and no name, Winston Churchill directed that all Submarines be named. Some minor ships had no Pennant Number, whilst others had them removed from photographs due to censorship. It is believed that the pennant system was last revised in 1947. At that time K, L and U all became F.

Usually, ships of the same Classification were grouped under the same Flag Superior, although this wasn't always the case. Due to sheer numbers of ships in the Second World War a greater number of Flag Superior allocations were in use. Today, the Flag Superior generally helps to identify the Class of ship, i.e. A – Auxiliaries, C – Cruisers, D = Destroyers, F = Frigates, H = Survey ships, K = Miscellaneous vessels, L = Amphibious warfare, M = Mine warfare, N = Minelayers, P = Patrol boats, R = Aircraft Carriers (A already in use for Auxiliaries), S = Submarine.

Some of the information on the lists was gleaned from an old copy of the BR619 (Admiralty Book of Reference) and publication contained a number in brackets following the Flag Superior heading. The number in brackets is the amount of space allocated to the number of vessels in that section, for additions. Some of the allocations were not used, whilst others may have been exceeded.

The following is a list of official class designators and their meanings for United Kingdom Ships under Naval control by class. The list was taken from an Unclassified NATO document:

SHIPS PENNANT NUMBERS

ROYAL NAVY SYSTEMS AS EXPLAINED BY WIKIPEDIA:

In the modern Royal Navy and other navies of Europe and the Commonwealth, ships are identified by pennant numbers (sometimes referred to as pendant numbers). The name pennant number arises from the fact that ships were originally allocated a pennant (flag) identifying a flotilla or particular type of vessel: for example, in the Royal Navy, the red burgee for torpedo boats, H for torpedo boat destroyers. By the addition of a number to the identifying pennant, each ship could be uniquely identified. A pennant number thus consists of letters and numbers. Where a letter precedes a number it is known as a flag superior and where it is a suffix it is known as a flag inferior. Not all pennants have a flag superior.

The system was adopted prior to World War I to distinguish between ships with the same or similar names, to reduce the size and improve the security of communications, and to assist recognition when ships of the same class are together. Traditionally, a pennant number was reported with a full stop "." between the flag superior or inferior and the number, although this practice has gradually been dropped, and inter-war photos after about 1924 tend not to have the full stop painted on the hull. The system was used throughout the navies of the British Empire so that a ship could be transferred from one navy to another without changing its pennant number.

Pennant numbers were originally allocated by individual naval stations and when a ship changed station it would be allocated a new number. The Admiralty took the situation in hand and first compiled a "Naval Pennant List" in 1910, with ships grouped under the distinguishing flag of their type. In addition, ships of the 2nd and 3rd (i.e. reserve) fleets had a second flag superior distinguishing from which naval depot they were manned; "C" for Chatham, "D" for Devonport, "N" for Nore and "P" for Portsmouth. Destroyers were initially allocated the flag superior "H", but as this covered only one hundred possible combinations from H00 to H99 the letters "G" and "D" were also allocated. When ships were sunk, their pennant numbers were reissued to new ships.

The flag superior for whole ship classes has often been changed while the numbers stayed the same. For example, in 1940, the Royal Navy swapped the letters "I" and "D" around (e.g. D18 became I18 and I18 became D18) and in 1948, "K", "L" and "U" all became "F", where there was a conflict, a 2 was added to the front of the pennant number.

During the 1970s the service stopped painting pennant numbers on submarines on the grounds that, with the arrival of nuclear boats, they spent too little time on the surface, although submarines do continue to be issued numbers. HMS Lancaster was initially allocated the pennant number F232, until it was realised that in the Royal Navy, form number 232 is the official report for ships that have run aground; sailors being superstitious, it was quickly changed to F229.

WORLD WAR II

No Flag Superior

Pennant number 13 was not allocated.

- Capital Ships, Aircraft Carriers, Cruisers

FLAG SUPERIORS

Pennant numbers 13 were not allocated to flag superiors. The letters J and K were used with three number combinations due to the number of vessels.

- D — Destroyers (until 1940), Capital Ships, Aircraft Carriers, Cruisers (from 1940)

SHIPS PENNANT NUMBERS

- F — Destroyers (until 1940),  Large auxiliary combatants (from 1940)
- G — Destroyers (from 1940)
- H — Destroyers
- I — Capital Ships, Aircraft Carriers, Cruisers (until 1940), Destroyers (from 1940)
- J — Minesweepers
- K — Corvettes, Frigates
- L — Escort destroyers, Sloops (until 1941)
- M — Minelayers
- N — Minesweepers
- P — Sloops (until 1939)
- R — Destroyers (from 1942), Sloops
- T — River gunboats
- U — Sloops (from 1941)
- X — Special service vessels
- 4 — Auxiliary anti-aircraft vessels (Some used the prefix "R" prior to 1942)
- FY — Fisheries (auxiliary fishing trawlers, drifter etc.)

FLAG INFERIORS

Flag inferiors were applied to submarines. Royal Navy submarines of the "H" and "L", and some transferred American vessels, were not issued names, only numbers. In these cases, the pennant number was simply the hull number inverted (i.e. L24 was issued pennant "24L"). Pre-war photos show the pennants painted correctly, with the flag inferior, but wartime photos show that the numbers tend to be painted "backwards", in that the inferior was painted on as a superior. For obvious reasons, the inferior "U" was not used so as not to confuse friendly ships with German U-boats. For similar reasons "V" was not used. Pennant numbers 00—10, 13, and those ending in a zero were not allocated to flag inferiors.

- A — Polish submarines transferred to Royal Navy in 1939
- C ("Coastal") — U class (pre-war construction)
- F ("Fleet") — River class
- H — H class
- L — L class
- M ("Minelayer") — Grampus class submarines
- P — O class, P class
 - 31P— U class (wartime construction), V class
 - 211P to 299P — S class (wartime construction)
 - 311P to 399P— T class
 - 411P to 499P— A class
 - 511P to 599P— United States Navy lend-lease submarines
 - 611P to 699P— Commandeered foreign construction
 - 711P to 799P— Captured enemy submarines
- R — R class
- S — S class submarines (pre-war construction)
- T — T class submarines (pre-war construction)

POST-1948

After World War 2, in 1948, the Royal Navy rationalised the pennant number system to a system where the flag superior indicated the basic type of ship as follows. "F" and "A" use two or three digits, "L" and "P" up to four. Again, pennant 13 is not used (for instance the current Ocean - L12 - is followed by Albion - L14;

SHIPS PENNANT NUMBERS

- A — Auxiliaries (vessels of Royal Fleet Auxiliary, Royal Maritime Auxiliary Service, Royal Navy Auxiliary Service, includes depot ships, boom defence vessels etc)
- C — Cruisers
- D — Destroyers
- F — Frigate (former escort destroyers, sloops and corvettes)
- H — Hydrographic vessels
- L — Amphibious warfare ships
- M — Minesweepers
- N — Minelayers (currently none in service, therefore unused)
- P — Patrol boats
- R — Aircraft carriers
- S — Submarines
- Y — Yard vessels

K was used for miscellaneous eg K07 was used by the seabed operations vessel HMS Challenger and K08 by HMS Lofoten.

FLOTILLA BANDS

1925-1939

From 1925, flotilla leaders were issued with but did not paint on pennant numbers. Instead, a broad band 4 feet (1.2 m) deep was painted round their fore-funnel. Divisional leaders wore a pennant number and had a narrower 2 feet (0.61 m) deep band on the fore-funnel, painted 3 feet (0.91 m) from the top. The Mediterranean Fleet wore black leader bands and the Atlantic - later Home Fleet wore white bands. The flotillas wore combinations of bands on their after funnel to identify them. From 1925 the following bands were worn;

- 1st Destroyer Flotilla — one black band
- 2nd Destroyer Flotilla — two black bands (one red from 1935)
- 3rd Destroyer Flotilla — three black bands
- 4th Destroyer Flotilla — no bands
- 5th Destroyer Flotilla — one white band
- 6th Destroyer Flotilla — two white bands
- 8th Destroyer Flotilla (from 1935) — one black and one white band

1939-

When single funnelled destroyers entered the fleet with the J class in 1939 and with an expansion in the number of flotillas, the system was changed accordingly. Single funnelled ships wore a 3 feet (0.91 m) deep band as a flotilla leader. As a divisional leader they had a 2 feet (0.61 m) wide vertical band the same colour as, and extending 6 feet (1.8 m) below, the upper flotilla band. Leaders bands were white for Home Fleet, red for Mediterranean Fleet, and the system of flotilla bands changed to;

- 1st Destroyer Flotilla (Mediterranean) — 1 red, G class
- 2nd Destroyer Flotilla (Mediterranean) — 2 red, H class
- 3rd Destroyer Flotilla (Mediterranean) — 3 red bands, then none, I class
- 4th Destroyer Flotilla (Mediterranean) — none, Tribal class
- 5th Destroyer Flotilla (Mediterranean) — none, K class
- 6th Destroyer Flotilla (Home) — 1 white, Tribal class
- 7th Destroyer Flotilla (Home) — 2 white, J class
- 8th Destroyer Flotilla (Home) — 3 white, F class

SHIPS PENNANT NUMBERS

- 9th Destroyer Flotilla (Home) — 1 black & 2 white, V and W class
- 10th Destroyer Flotilla (Home) — none, V & W class
- 11th Destroyer Flotilla (Western Approaches) — 1 black over 2 red, V and W class
- 12th Destroyer Flotilla (Rosyth) — 1 white over 1 red, E class
- 13th Destroyer Flotilla (Gibraltar) — 1 white over 2 red, V and W class
- 14th Destroyer Flotilla (Home) — 1 red over 1 black, V and W class
- 15th Destroyer Flotilla (Rosyth) — 1 red over 2 black, V and W class
- 16th Destroyer Flotilla (Portsmouth) — 1 red over 1 white, V and W class
- 17th Destroyer Flotilla (Western Approaches) (from 1940) — 1 red over 2 white, Town class
- 18th Destroyer Flotilla (Channel) — 1 white & 1 black, A class
- 19th Destroyer Flotilla (Dover)— 1 white over 2 black, B class
- 20th Destroyer Flotilla (Portsmouth) — 2 white over 1 black, C class
- 21st Destroyer Flotilla (China Station) — 2 white over 1 red, D class

Early into the war the bands soon fell out of use as ships were camouflaged and war-losses, operational requirements and new construction broke up the homogeneity of the destroyer flotillas. Vessels were deployed as and when they were needed or available, and were often incorporated into mixed "escort groups" containing a range of vessel types such as sloops, corvettes, frigates and escort carriers. A few of the escort groups adopted funnel bands; others like B7 Group wore letters on their funnels.

POST-WAR

After World War 2, were no longer identified by bands, but by large cast metal numbers bolted to the funnels. Flotilla leaders continued to display a large band at the top of the funnel, however.

DECK CODES

Aircraft carriers and vessels operating aircraft have a deck code painted on the flight deck to aid identification by aircraft attempting to land. This is in a position clearly visible on the approach path. The Royal Navy uses a single letter (typically the first letter of the ship's name) for aircraft carriers and large vessels operating aircraft, and pairs of letters (usually letters from the ship's name) for smaller vessels. Deck codes used by contemporary major British naval warships include:

- HMS Indomitable — A
- RFA Argus — AS
- HMS Albion — AB
- HMAS Melbourne — B then R21
- HMS Bulwark — BK
- HMS Colossus — C
- HMS Eagle — E
- HMS Indefatigable — F
- HMS Warrior — J
- HMS Illustrious — L
- HMS Implacable — M
- HMS Invincible — N
- HMS Ocean — O
- HMS Perseus — P

AUSTRALIAN PENNANT NUMBERS

Thanks to Hayden Williams for the following explanation

From 1948 (?) the RAN used the RN/NATO pennant numbers. Since 1969, the RAN has maintained the number sequence but incorporated the U.S. hull classification symbols). Consequences of this were:

- Flag superior for major warships is not shown.
- Auxiliaries usually do not show the ‘A’ but show minor descriptors
- Frigates were designated Destroyer Escorts and given numbers in the D series. This has now reverted to Frigates. For example, F02 Queenborough became D57 in 1968. The frigate Canberra in 1980 received F02

Many pennant numbers are being re-used. The 1960s DDGs were Perth D38, Hobart D39 and Brisbane D41. The current DDG’s being built are Hobart D39, Brisbane D41 and Sydney D42. The Adelaide class frigates were Adelaide 01 and Canberra 02. When the first LHD (Canberra) was launched in 2011, it was given L02 to replicate the number of its predecessor.

Most Australian auxiliaries are operated by Defence Maritime Services (DMS) and are commercially registered with no pennant numbers.

SHIPS PENNANT NUMBERS

FIRST WORLD WAR SHIP PENNANT NUMBERS

The Pennant numbers allocated to some ships during the First World War appear to have changed on at least two, and in some cases three, separate occasions. In an effort to list the ships, and relevant changes, the format of listings has been changed for this section. It is assumed that the pennant numbers were used for flag signalling, rather than being painted on the hull. Because of the format in this section, it is recommended to use a "search" function to find a particular pennant number or ship name.
